FINN SOUGHT AFTER DEATH OF HIS WIFE

Toivo Valikangas of Malcolm Island Wanted By Police

Body of Wife Found in Pond With Wound on Back of Head

Provincial Police here and all over Vancouver Island and the Mainland have launched a wide search for Toivo Valikangas, a Finn, of Malcolm Island, B.C., following the death of the man's wife some weeks ago.

According to Provincial Police headquarters, the body of Mrs. Valikangas was found in a small pond not far from the homestead occupied by the two with a wound in the back of the head.

Valikangas has disappeared since the finding of the body and police have been unable to secure any trace of the man. It is thought likely he has reached the mainland and may be hundreds of miles away from the scene of the alleged crime.

Police here are sending out word to the various departments all over the country with a description of the missing man in the hope that he may be picked up somewhere in America.

Malcolm Island is a few miles northeast of Alert Bay on the east coast of Vancouver Island.

URGES CHAMBER TO GET SURVEY

James Parfitt Enthusiastic on Service Offered By Ottawa

With the advice at the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of Interior at its disposal, Victoria need do no guessing but can act on facts when considering plans for industry, James Parfitt, reported to the Chamber of Commerce directors to-day.

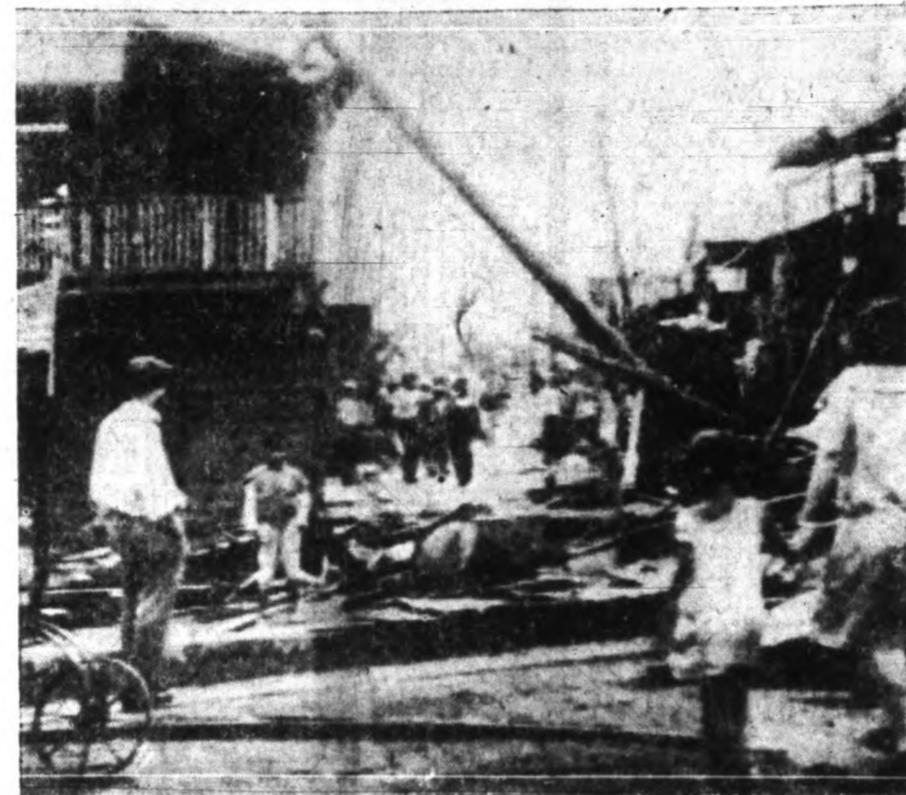

Mr. Parfitt was enthusiastic in his praise of the service offered and urged the Chamber of Commerce to seize the opportunity of securing the services of an expert who would be placed at its disposal to complete a survey from which Victoria could shape its policy in bidding for industries.

Mr. Parfitt pointed to the success in securing industries in other parts of Canada which had followed such surveys and the advice of experts of the Interior Department.

B.C. To Fight Higher Tariff On U.S. Coal

In accordance with views expressed by Vancouver Island coal operators the British Columbia Government will oppose the application of Nova Scotia to the Tariff Advisory Board of the Dominion for an increase in the rate of duty on bituminous coal entering Canada. On the proposal for an increase in duty being brought before the Hon. W. A. McKenzie, Minister of Mines, the Canadian Association by the United States, with a raising of duty against Canadian coal was drawn attention to. The decision to oppose the Nova Scotia proposal has been reached on the receipt of replies to circulars sent out to coal operators of British Columbia. The Canadian Association has been instructed by Attorney-General Pooley to appear before the Tariff Advisory Board to protest against the application to increase the duty on U.S. coal.

Storm's Destruction in San Juan, Porto Rico

Above is reproduced the first photo to reach Victoria from San Juan, capital of Porto Rico, which, with all other ports of that island, was swept by a great hurricane last week. It gives an impression of the devastation.

After the picture had reached New York it was telephoned to San Francisco and brought by air mail to Seattle, from where it reached Victoria.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 21.—A motor launch owned by the Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior will start from Fort Fitzgerald, on the Slave River, to aid in the search for Major A. Earl Godfrey's party and its missing seaplane, it was announced this afternoon by J. G. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of National Defence.

The launch will go along the Slave and Peace Rivers, the party keeping a sharp lookout along the banks for any signs of the missing aircraft and its men.

In the meantime it is thought members of the party may be walking out to get help and there is a possibility they may have started to walk to Vermilion, where they could board a steamer.

The Ladd Lake air base in Northern Saskatchewan by way of Fort McMurray and Fort Chipewyan to follow the route believed to have been taken by the Godfrey plane. A report from the relief plane is expected later in the day. Captain Mercer will land at different points in his endeavor to find out from trappers and Indians if the plane was sighted on its flight northward.

NO WORD RECEIVED

No word has been received since the aviators left Peace River, Sunday, and increasing anxiety for their safety is expressed by department officials.

In company with Wing Commanders J. L. Gordon and L. S. Bradner and Sergeant-Major Graham, mechanic Godfrey was making an inspection of air bases in the Northwest.

The Godfrey seaplane is the one which he and Graham recently flew from Ottawa to Vancouver with a test mail shipment.

MURDERER IS BEING HUNTED AT HONOLULU

Many Men Organized in Groups Search For Kidnaper
of Gill Jamieson

Honolulu, Sept. 21—Honolulu met the challenge of a major crime to-day with police, the military and scores of volunteers organized into working units to hunt down the kidnapper and slayer of Gill Jamieson, ten-year-old son of Frederick W. Jamieson, banker. The body of the boy, who was kidnapped from school last Tuesday, was found yesterday on the bank of the Alawai Canal near the fashionable Royal Hawaiian Hotel.

Completing the search for the young victim was a threat of mob violence which followed indignation meetings held throughout the city last night. A vigilance committee was formed at one meeting last night. Newsmen were barred from the meeting.

A total fund of $20,000 for arrest of the kidnappers was expected to be raised before nightfall to-day. The fund was started by the Chamber of Frederick W. Jamieson, father of the murdered boy, is vice-president of the Hawaiian Trust Company.

The finding of the body ended a search by thousands of persons, carried on since the lad was kidnapped from school Tuesday and held for a ransom of $10,000. A man got the boy from school by saying his mother had been injured and desired him to return home.

Death was threatened unless the ransom was paid.

Physicians said the boy probably had been strangled Tuesday night.

FINGERPRINTS FOUND

Fingerprints found on articles near the body are in possession of the police, for comparison with the fingers of any person or persons who may be arrested.

The body was found by searchers who had struggled through fifty yards of underbrush.

FATHER SAW KIDNAPPER

Complying with instructions received by note and telephone, Jameson, the father, kept a rendezvous with a man Tuesday night at a band concert in Thomas Square. The father gave the abductor $4,000, having been promised Gill would be returned to him unharmed, but the kidnapper disappeared. It is believed the boy was killed a few hours ago.

The search that followed for the boy and his captors was participated by hundreds of soldiers, sailors, schoolboys who volunteered their aid to police, and sheriff's officers.

CARDS FOUND

Within five pages of the body when it was found lay the halves of three playing cards, all kings. These carried out the theme of the letter describing ransom sent to Jamieson Tuesday. It was signed "The Three Kings." The cards were given to fingerprint experts.

FALSE PRETENCES CHARGE HEARD

Vancouver, Sept. 21—Tried on four charges of obtaining money by false pretences, Alex Swanson, manager of a local auto concern, was formally committed by Magistrate Shaw to take his trial at a higher court. The alleged defalcations are said to involve some $7,225, four counts being covered by the charges.

of the message.

Lyons asserted Northcott, in the Oakalla Jail, had sent for him and that he would act as counsel for the youth.

CALLS FOR WITNESSES

When announcing the extradition move would be contested by Northcott and his mother, Mr. Lyons stated she would call in for the production of the state witnesses, who would have the opportunity of cross-examining them.

In the event of the British Columbia courts ordering the extradition of the accused, Mr. Lyons has been asked by Northcott, to appear for him at his trial in Canada. Whether the California court would grant this privilege to a British Columbia barrister is problematical.

STATEMENT REPORT

Vancouver, Sept. 21—Inspector Forbes Crulchshanks of the British Columbia Police to-day refused to comment on a dispatch from Los Angeles that Gordon Stuart Northcott had made a statement to the police here. He would neither confirm nor deny the report.

Calgary, Sept. 21—Mrs. Winifred Clark, daughter of Mrs. Louise Northcott and brother of Gordon Stuart Northcott, arrived in Calgary at 1:30 o'clock this morning and called at city police headquarters to see her mother.

JESSIE CLARK ILL

Vancouver, Sept. 21—Jessie Clark, niece of Gordon Stuart Northcott, who is now in the Oakalla jail, was relieved of the protection of the Provincial Police to-day. The girl is reported to be in a state of fear and worry over the Northcott case. Rightly or wrongly, she suspected an attempt would be made on her life because of her connection with the "murder farm" mystery. The girl is stated to be in such an overwrought condition that a period of Mrs. Clark is not under arrest. No charge has been preferred against her and she is registered at a local hotel.

She declined to discuss the case and stated she merely wanted to be near her mother in her trouble.

NORTHCOTT'S STORY
GIVEN IN OWN WORDS

TALKS FREELY

Northcott gave the interview on the train which bore him from Kamloops to Vancouver yesterday. It was not even necessary to ask him for a statement. He started speaking of his own accord. The youth betrayed nervousness only when he was asked to remove his cap, which he touched to his dry lips.

"Well, take a good look at the horrible criminal. Does he look as terrible as he is painted?" he said.

Northcott is an extremely good-looking youth and has an almost winning manner. His hair sweeps back in an easy wave from the parting on the left, and there is a ready smile on the lips held by his well modeled nose. His eyes alone are peculiar. They are deep blue, but possess a fixed, staring quality, as if their owner was in a thrall.

On the train he wore a smartly cut brown tweed suit with a dark brown stripe. His tie was brown with cream-colored spots, and there was a thin brown line in his shirt.

FOUND AMUSEMENT

"Well, I suppose you are surprised not to find me armed to the teeth, as they said about poor little mother?" he remarked with a trace of bitterness. "Reading all these stories about myself has certainly given me a lot of amusement."

He continued with his denial of the charges and the reason for his flight.

Northcott kept up a running fire of conversation on the way to Vancouver and took great delight in telling train officials how he had eluded capture several times.

On Monday, after his train was lost at the Pandora Street rooming house in Vancouver, he drove to Blaine, Wash., intending to recover his automobile, which was in the hands of customs authorities there. He used a "big blue car" on that trip, he said, but according to Col. J. H. McMullin, head of the British Columbia Police, he was driving a Ford.

Twice on Monday night, while he was believed to be still in Vancouver, he crossed and recrossed the line at Blaine.

On the first occasion, he said, after reading in the United States side, he crossed himself fourth or fifth in a line of automobiles. He noticed other motorists being searched and their effects examined. Realizing inspection of his papers or baggage in the auto would reveal his identity, he felt capture was imminent.

But luck and his own resourcefulness saved him.

CARRIED SUITCASES

Northcott noticed a woman accompanied by two children, struggling with several suitcases. Alighting from his car, he hurried to assist her and while he was thus engaged the customs and immigration men missed him.

Northcott chuckled at the memory of the incident.

AGAIN CROSSED LINE

For the second time he did not divulge he turned back to the Canadian side after this narrow escape, but again entered the United States a short time later. Again he felt it wiser to return to Canada.

Early Tuesday the hunted man and his mother were driving north from Osoyoos. They reached Lillooet, sped through the Murtle Canyon, passed Ashcroft and reached Spence's Bridge Tuesday afternoon.

As told by Northcott, it was a wild ride.

"I was not accustomed to the car," he said, "and it had no brakes. Descending hills I put it in reverse, but that did not do any good either. All the time my baggage, plainly marked with my initials, were in the car."

At Spence's Bridge he put his mother on a train for Calgary and drove to a point near Princeton. He left the auto on the track five miles out of the town and hid his baggage in a bush.

From Princeton he took train to West Similkameen, and there embarked on a boat for Okanagan Lake, famous, which he thought was bound for Sicamous. That last "leg" of his trip led him into the hands of the police.

TALKS OF NEWSPAPERS

Northcott discussed on a variety of subjects. He had decided views on newspapers.

"I read newspapers, especially those in the South," he said. "I convict when he comes to trial. I do not think there should be so much publicity about crimes before the man charged with them comes into court. I don't blame the newspapers so much. They are in a competitive business. But I do blame the administration that permits the practice."

SPRAYS OF HICKMAN

The Hickman case was cited to him as an example of his contention. "Oh that was different," he said. "Hickman deserved all he got."

Though Canadian-born Northcott finds the Canadian pronunciation strange in some respects.

"Take the word 'calm,'" he insisted. "Now on the prairie they pronounce it 'cam,' while down South we say 'calm.'"

Gazing through the car window at the fertile Fraser Valley, he said:

"This country should be full of fruit trees."

He launched into a comparison of British Columbia and California, describing in detail the development of Los Angeles.

PRIDES POLICE

Northcott had praise for his captors. "I wish you would say," he requested, "that the British Columbia Police have treated me wonderfully. I have neither been arrested nor detained. Everything possible was done by them to make me comfortable."

He touched on third degree methods in other parts of the world.

"They," he said with a laugh, "I've heard of men who confessed to the murder of

TOLMIE GOVERNMENT AND COAL DUTIES

THE ACTION OF THE TOLMIE GOVERNMENT in opposing, before the Tariff Advisory Board, the application of the Maritime Provinces for an increase in the customs duty on coal imports, shows how responsibility influences the attitude to public questions, often to the point of a complete reversal of policy. The Government's course is prompted by the realization that if the duty on coal imported from the United States were increased, Washington would retaliate, with the result that the shipments of coal from British Columbia to the States would be stopped and the British Columbia coal industry would be severely crippled. Hence, however beneficial a duty on coal imports would be to the collieries of Nova Scotia, it would be ruinous to the collieries of B.C. This is an old story in our columns, but apparently not until now have our Conservative friends realized the truth of it. A little experience in public office is a great education.

When he was a member of the House of Commons Dr. Tolmie subscribed whole-heartedly to the Conservative Party's policy of tariff protection. His platform utterances and his speeches in Parliament for several years have been marked by the advocacy of higher duties and a number of embargoes. As the leader of the Conservative Party in British Columbia during the recent election campaign, from which he emerged with a following large enough to entitle him to form a government, he repeatedly talked about the need of a higher tariff. We feel sure that he was sincere in these expressions of policy. But after a month in office he has discovered that a vital industry in this province soon would be in dire straits if the policy of the Conservative Party on the tariff were applied to it.

It is gratifying to The Times to see the Government invoking so sound a Liberal principle as opposing a tariff increase. What applies to coal, of course, applies with equal force to other commodities involved in trade between Canada and the United States. The Liberal Government of this province was often urged to persuade the Federal authorities to put an embargo on the export of British Columbia logs to the United States. The point that only logs for which no market existed here were being thus disposed of in their raw state cut no figure in the arguments advanced. The Times frequently emphasized the fact that if such an embargo were to be imposed on the export of these logs, certain interests in the state of Washington would use it as an argument with the United States Congress for a retaliatory duty on British Columbia shingles. Reprisal of that kind would destroy an important British Columbia industry, for approximately ninety per cent. of the shingles turned out in the mills of this province, particularly in the case of Vancouver Island mills, are exported to the neighboring republic.

This Dominion imports nearly $50,000,000 worth of coal from the United States annually. All Central Canada, in fact the great area between Montreal and Winnipeg, is wholly dependent upon American coal. What is $50,000,000 to the yearly business of the U.S.? It is merely a drop in the bucket; but it is business which Canada is obliged to give to her in order that extensive industrial and domestic requirements on this side may be satisfied. Several aspects thus are involved in any proposal to increase the duty on these imports. We would very seriously handicap millions of our people in Central Canada, besides laying the foundation for the ruin of the coal mining industry of British Columbia, if we in this province were to support the application which Eastern interests propose to present to the Tariff Advisory Board. We have not yet solved the problem of transporting coal all the way from British Columbia and Alberta to Ontario so that it can be disposed of at a price comparable to the price paid for coal imported a few hundred miles from Pennsylvania, much of which reaches its Canadian market chiefly by the Great Lakes route.

We shall await with considerable interest—and pardonable amusement—the reaction to the Tolmie Government's attitude on the coal tariff question from the high protection advocates, notably our morning contemporary, who would have assailed the MacLean Government most violently if it had opposed an increase in the tariff on imports from the United States as the Tolmie Government is doing. We can assure them that the new Government often will startle them—and probably itself—in this way. The situation is not without its appeal to the sense of humor of that part of the public which has such a thing.

OLD DOGS LEARN, TOO

NOT VERY LONG AGO A WHIMSICAL chemist undertook to disprove the old adage, "you can't make a silk purse from a sow's ear."

He got the sow's ear, went into his laboratory, and eventually emerged with a silk purse.

Now Edward L. Thorndike, Columbia university psychologist, steps forward to upset another ancient maxim—"you can't teach an old dog new tricks."

Professor Thorndike spent two years studying the proposition. Now, writing in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, he announces that it is, as a general thing, easier to teach new tricks to an old dog than to a young one.

He made extensive studies of the way adults assimilate new knowledge, and declares that a man of thirty, forty or even fifty can learn a new trade, a new profession, a new language or a new art as quickly as a college youth; indeed, in some cases the adult will learn quicker and more easily than the youngster.

Professor Thorndike believes there is just one reason why the average person doesn't know twice as much at forty as he does at twenty. That is because the average person, entering his twenties, assumes that his education is complete, and does not try to learn anything more.

All of this is highly encouraging. Too many of us, getting into a rut of habit or work as we leave our youth behind, long to make a change but do not try to because we believe it is too late. We allow ourselves to stay fixed in the grooves we slipped into in our youth.

Professor Thorndike comes to our rescue by telling us, in effect: "Go ahead and try it. Your mind is a fertile and receptive now as it ever was. You can learn anything you want to. If you're not satisfied with what you are doing now, learn how to do something else. It's perfectly possible."

Psychologists, chemists and other scientists have done a good deal for us in recent years. But nothing they have done is much more important than this exploding of the old maxims that we used to trust so implicitly.

Such sayings may represent the accumulated wisdom of the ages, to be sure. But they also may represent only the mistaken notions of our forefathers. They are more apt to fester us than help us. If we can break away from them we may find a new freedom.

ANOTHER PROOF OF PROSPERITY

SOME TIME AGO A NUMBER OF PROMINENT FINANCIAL men in the United States pointed with some amazement to the fact that Canada was going ahead in a most remarkable fashion as an exporter of capital as well as of wheat. We are reminded of the grounds upon which they based their comments on this development by the September bulletin issued by the Royal Bank of Canada. In that document it is noted that the Dominion's investments abroad have practically doubled since 1923. In other words, at the beginning of 1927, $1,300,000,000 of Canadian capital was working abroad, equal to approximately one-fourth of the amount of foreign capital invested in this country. The bank's bulletin comments on this as follows:

This export of capital has served to permit Canada to regain the control of a number of heavy industries where control had previously been held abroad. As examples of this movement, we may note particularly the securities of Goodyear, The Windsor Hotel, Hiram Walker Distillery, Acidine Sugar, Canadian Bronze Company, Imperial Mills, National Steel Car, Lake Superior Corporation, Provincial Paper and Noranda Mines. The same trend is apparent in relation to International Nickel, Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Christie Brown, Bramall Traction and Imperial Tobacco.

In addition, Canadians are participating in the purchase of securities underwritten in the United States, and, in fact, the great majority of Canadian issues brought out in the United States are jointly offered to the Canadian public by Canadian underwriters.

This impartial analysis of Canada's financial condition will be cold comfort to our prophets of gloom. Mr. Bennett has been going about the country telling the people that the prosperity which is so obvious to everybody is only "seeming prosperity." We note, however, that Mr. J. A. McLeod, the general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, who was in the city yesterday, finds business conditions throughout the country "better than ever." Even the Maritime Provinces, to which the Federal Conservative leader has given a good deal of attention of late, Mr. McLeod found in better shape financially than they had been for some years. The taxpayers, of course, will take the word of the banker where business is concerned.

A CORRECTION

AN ARTICLE UNDER THE HEADING "Strive to Outdo Each Other," which was printed in The Times yesterday evening, was erroneously credited to The Toronto Globe. It should have been credited to The Toronto Star.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

THE BANK MERGER

From The Saskatoon Star

(Mr. Robb, returning from abroad, said that the bank merger had not yet taken place.) If Mr. Robb glances back through the files of newspapers published in his absence overseas, he will find that a cross-country opinion is already available. Generally speaking, it is hostile to the bank merger. Several newspapers have attacked the proposal in strong terms. None that we know of has contended that the union of the two banks will help the public by enlarging credit facilities or improving the efficiency of banking services. If the Government is guided by the opinion of the country, we think that its action will be to stop the merger.

DECLARER'S STRATEGY

As the dummy is exposed and the declarer plays to convert losing tricks into winning tricks, he prepares to utilize the working tools—finessing, squeezing, ruffing, sluffing (discarding low cards of another suit upon winning cards) and throwing the lead. At times, when finessing, it is advisable to employ the "feint" finesse, an illustration thereof being as follows:

Dummy—diamonds A J 10 7.
 East—
 Declarer—diamonds K 9 6 5.
 West—

You will note that the finesse may be taken either way. If there has been no indication of the location of the Queen of diamonds, the declarer should lead the Queen of diamonds to coax east to cover with the Queen of diamonds. Regardless of whether east does so or not, declarer should play the King of diamonds. On the next round he should lead the 9 of diamonds, using his own hand and the finesse, unless it is covered with the Queen of diamonds by west.

REGRET VOICED FOR DISORDER

South African Government to Prosecute Leader of Attack on Commissioner

Sims, India, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)—Details of an attack on Rt. Hon. V. S. Srinivasa Sastry, agent of the Government of India to South Africa, by a crowd of young men headed by Deputy Mayor Evans of Klerksdorp, Transvaal, last Saturday, were disclosed yesterday in a telegram received by Brig. Gen. J. W. Irwin, Viceroy of India, from Sir William Solomon, Acting Governor-General of South Africa.

The official account contained an expression of regret on behalf of the South African Government and stated action would be taken against Evans in due course.

GUEST AT DINNER

Sastry was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Indian community at Klerksdorp. Before the dinner Evans called a meeting, which was attended by 150 to 200 of the "rougher element of the town," at which the deputy mayor protested strongly against the South African Government's agreement with India.

While the dinner was proceeding on Saturday evening, Evans, accompanied by about thirty youths, forced an entrance into the hall, where Mr. Sastry held a meeting later in the evening. When Mr. Sastry ended his address, Evans arose and protested. Simultaneously some one extinguished the lights.

Mr. Sastry, standing on the platform, was the target of several eggs, which were thrown at him. He turned to run but hit him. Panic ensued in the hall when the rowdiness started and the audience rushed out to the street.

Later the meeting was continued in an orderly manner in the open air.

Mr. Sastry went to his hotel without further molestation after the meeting, although a large crowd gathered.

In August, 1922, Mr. Sastry was a visitor to America. The delegation of natives of India in British Columbia was the subject of his conferences with the Government.

Victorian Back From The Desert Tells Of Black Gold Romance

The romance and lure of the oil fields of California, more exciting and spectacular than the gold rush of '49, were graphically described by James Porter, former Victorian, visiting his home town again after over ten years in the deserts of Southern California. At a banquet given in his honor at Deep Cove, Canada, by some of his old friends, he pointed out, over and over again, the secret of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Tourist Group of the Chamber, Mr. Porter told how several Victorians who had gone to California ten or twelve years ago had become millionaires with the oil business and told of their life in the desert as employees of one of the largest oil firms in the world. Although desert life, with the perpetual heat and sandstorms, had its drawbacks, especially when compared with the evergreen Pacific Northwest and Victoria, with its cooling sea breezes and wonderful fishing, it had its compensations. He was loud in his praise of the generous treatment and consideration given to the workers by the company with whom he now holds a responsible position.

BLACK GOLD

He quoted at length from an interesting article by Howard C. Kegley in Touring Topics in which the amazing romance of California's black gold is dealt with. Capitalists who went to the oil fields in the early days of the twentieth century, the article points out, looked about in disgust and left because there was no coal or merchantable timber.

Back in 1849, 70,000 persons flocked from all points of the compass searching for gold. Most of them thought they had found it. The year 1915 was the banner year of California's gold production. The value of gold produced that year was $22,442,000. In the same year California's oil production was valued at $345,546,000. From 1877 to 1927 the value of oil and gold mining in California was $653,736,000 while the value of all petroleum produced during that same period was $2,559,294,000. There are 121,000 acres of proven oil land in the state of California and these are chiefly in Orange, Los Angeles, Kern, Ventura, Fresno and Santa Barbara counties.

Mr. Porter described scenes that sometimes follow a strike. As indications that the drillers are expecting to find oil become known, persons interested become wildly excited. In many instances, he points out, they have risked nothing financially. They have leased their property to a big company for drilling purposes with a clause in the contract that they receive a royalty on every barrel of oil. The success of the company brings fortunes for the private individuals. In such instances, from the oil company a few hundred dollars in lots or acreages they may reap fortunes. Royalties paid by oil companies to individuals from whom they have secured leases sometimes run as high as thousands of dollars a week. He described the excitement of one property owner who had leased land to an oil company on a royalty basis. When oil was found he became so enthusiastic that he gave a party to every driller and man on the job. He ended by presenting each one with an automobile. "And on the royalties he received he was able to do so," Mr. Porter said.

COMPANIES TAKE RISK

It was a wrong assumption, Mr. Porter maintained, that the oil companies got all of the money derived from oil. The companies had to buy or lease land upon which to drill for oil and in either case the property owner was greatly benefited. If the company bought the land outright it paid a stipulated sum for it and if it leased land it generally paid a cash bonus for the privilege of drilling, paid a rental of so much per acre per month and gave the landowner one-fifth to one-sixth of the oil found.

It is not uncommon, the landowner not more out of an oil transaction than the company. It had been estimated that for the last five years the oil companies have been paying landowners in California at least $20,000,000 a year for the privilege of drilling and wildcatting for oil.

Mr. Porter quoted from Mr. Kegley's article to show conspicuous examples of what oil has done for property owners. One was the case of C. C. Chapman.

After years of struggle against the vicissitudes of farm life Mr. Chapman became quite successful as an orange grower and developed a ranch of 265 acres.

It was along about 1917 that the Union Oil Company drilled a wildcat well on Mr. Chapman's ranch and struck oil. The district was named Richfield.

The Chapman property seemed to be right on top of the pool. Since oil was first found there the Union has taken 9,055,382 barrels of oil from the lease.

Of that amount Mr. Chapman has recived one-sixth, to say nothing of his share of the casting-head gasoline and the natural gas. It is a simple problem in arithmetic to ascertain that Mr. Chapman has received over 1,500,000 barrels of oil as his share, and it wouldn't be a poor guess to estimate that his total return from the petroleum products on that ranch has been more than $2,000,000.

BENEFITS THOUSANDS

Some idea of the manner in which this oil discovery has benefited thousands of persons rather than Mr. Chapman alone may be gathered from the fact that as early as 1926 he drove into Los Angeles with his automobile containing more than $1,500,000 for the outright purchase from the Los Angeles Investment Company of the Investment Building, a height-limit office structure at the northeast corner of Eighth and Broadway, which is now known as the C. C. Chapman building. Purchase of this building by Mr. Chapman enabled the Los Angeles Investment Company to resume payment of dividends, after financial difficulties which had endured for several years. Soon after Mr. Chapman purchased the property, the company paid a quarterly dividend on the basis of 10 per cent per annum to 16,000 stockholders.

While in Victoria Mr. Porter was a guest of his brother David Porter. Fishing on Vancouver Island, particularly after his years on the desert, proved a great attraction and he was fortunate in landing several fine salmon.

MASTER SPIES!

By Joseph Gollomb

AUTHOR OF "MASTER MAN-HUNTERS," Etc.

THE TIMES announces a new series by this favorite writer of real detective stories that are more intense and gripping than fiction. In the present series there is the additional interest of a wartime background—not only the late world conflict, but also the Napoleonic wars, the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, the American Civil War, and other historic struggles.

In every country of importance, at any given time, there are spies, especially military spies, at work for every other country. So that when the hour strikes, war college chiefs are prepared on the instant to say, as Gen. von Moltke said to the Prussian General Staff in 1870:

"Go to Cabinet No. 3, take down File No. 7 and follow the directions you will find there."

They did so and were in possession of complete plans for the swoop of conquest that shortly became history, all minutely worked out in advance. GOLLOMB, who has made his world-wide reputation writing inside and official detective stories of the chief capitals of Europe and America, knows all about spies—men and women, military and civilian, crooks and crook-catchers. He shows them on the job, individually and collectively, in NINE DRAMATIC STORIES, titles and outstanding features of which include:

ENGLAND SETS A SPY TRAP

And what it caught in the World War.

THE SPY WHO HAD TO DIE

Because he double-crossed.

SPIES WHO WON

Especially the Englishman Saunders, and the Germans Franck and Wassmuss.

A NETFUL OF SPIES

The spectacular career of Dr. Stieber, who organized and led an army of spies.

WEDDING AT TEMPLE HALL

Dr. Davies Officiates at Nuptials of Miss S. Mowat and R. Snider

Charming in every detail was the wedding which took place Wednesday evening at the City Temple Hall, where a profusion of early autumn flowers, Dr. Cleo Davies, united the bride, Sallie, the only daughter of Miss Josephine Mowat, of 1168 Oscar Street, and the late Mr. John Mowat, and Mr. Ralph Edward Snider, young son of Mrs. MacArthur, of 1505 Elford Street, and the late Mr. William Snider of Waterloo, Ont.

As the bridal party entered the hall, Miss Katie Brown played the wedding march.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Ian Mowat, the bride was lovely in her wedding gown of white satin embroidered in seed pearls, fashioned in simple mode, with a row of silk roses and fringes caught at the hips and held in place by a diamante ornament. Her conventional veil of fine Brussels net, exquisitely embroidered in true lover's knots, was arranged cap shape and was held in place by a triple band of orange blossoms. Completing her lovely toilette was a white lace headband with pink rose buds and white carnations.

Assisting the bride were Miss Elsie Snider and Miss Lorna Cutler, each wearing charming frocks. Miss Snider wore a beaded and beaded gown with becoming picture hat. She carried a lovely bouquet of roses and pink gladioli. Miss Cutler was wearing a beaded frock of boules de roses with picture hat to tone. She carried mauve asters and pine sweet peas.

Mr. Roy C. Hebdon assisted the groom. The ushers were Mr. Joseph Mowat and Mr. Fred Hole.

During the signing of the register, Miss J. Duncan sang "All Joy Be Thine."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at 1135 Rockland Avenue, the future home of the happy couple. They received their numerous guests in the spacious dining-room, decorated with a floral arch and wedding bell. For the occasion the room had been decorated with Autumn blooms and ferns.

Mrs. J. Mowat, wearing a becoming black gown and Paris model hat, and Mrs. MacArthur in orchid lace over satin, with picture hat, assisted the bride and groom to welcome their many guests.

The prettily-appointed table, from which a buffet supper was served, was centred with a handsome four-tier wedding cake and was decorated with pink rosebuds and sweet peas, with harmonizing candles in silver peacock holders.

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Alder and daughter, Lucille, left yesterday for their home in Los Angeles, after a short visit at Mr. Alder's parents on Hampstead Road.

On Wednesday evening a large assembly of friends of the principals met at "Breadalbane," 2347 Windsor Road, with the bride, Sallie Mowat, and Mrs. E. Trowdale presiding. There was a splendid turnout of members and a number of visitors, including P.F.G.M. Sister E. Doane, of Edmonton, who being an old and well-known member of Purple Star, was heartily welcomed.

Miss Ruth Jones has returned home after visiting Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Fuller in Seattle.

Mr. Roy Castle and Mrs. Leonard Andrews are motoring up the Island for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Peers of Vancouver, are guests at the James Bay Hotel.

Mr. Frank Berridge, manager of the Aberdeen Hotel, has returned from a week's hunting trip at Lake Cowichan.

Mr. John Leach, a student at the University of British Columbia, has returned to Vancouver after spending a few days as the guest of Mr. Thomas Little.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Thomas and Mr. R. D. Peers of Vancouver, are guests at the James Bay Hotel.

THE ADVANTAGES OF A NURSERY SCHOOL

Mrs. B. J. H. writes:

"Please answer the following questions: At what age should a child go to school? And what are nursery schools? What do they hope to gain?"

The average well child begins his elementary school work at five years. The nursery school, however, will take the care and training of children under school age. Nursery school regulations differ, but in the two with which I am most familiar children are taken from the age of two on.

The child comes at nine in the morning and is kept until 3:15. He plays in a large room with every imaginable equipment for keeping a child happy and busy. There are stairs to climb, dolls and doll furniture, large blocks, small chairs and tables, rubber toys, boats, airplanes, books, etc. The children are in the room with the children and watch them, but the children choose their own toys and play with them as they choose.

On mornings suitable for outdoor play they all go outdoors from 9:15 until 11. Then they go to go to toilet, wash hands, face and comb hair and lie down for a short rest period. At 1:30 they have their lunches, feeding themselves, putting on bibs if possible, carrying their own napkins or bibs to the table afterwards and leave

Mere Men to Organize to Keep Women in Their Places

Crookston, Minn., Sept. 21—Subservient of woman to man is the purpose of a club organized here by a group of prominent married men of this city.

Dedicated to the creed of Premier Mussolini of Italy that "It is the duty of the man to be the head of the family," the new organization cabled Premier Mussolini yesterday its congratulations on an article appearing in a national magazine.

In the article the Premier promulgated his principle of women's obedience to man.

Humors were current that a counter-organization is being planned by the wives of men who are charter members of the club.

The men expect to erect a fitting monument to the Italian leader, who is styled the "man of the century" as "Champion of the Husbands' Cause."

The Turkish name for Constantinople is Ibtambol or Stamboul, derived from the Greek meaning "town" or "in town."

Vancouver Asks Local Aid for Foundation Fund

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 21—The first local appeal in the Dominion-wide effort to be conducted by The National Council of Women of Canada for a $200,000 Foundation Fund has been launched by Vancouver Local Council.

Vancouver was one of the cities visited by Mrs. Myrtle E. Etherington, of Kingstone, Ont., first vice-president of the National Council of Women and convener of the Foundation Fund Committee, on a tour of the western provinces from which she recently returned.

According to Mrs. Etherington all indications point toward a hearty support of the Foundation Fund projected in the West. Speaking of the trip she said:

"The attitude of the members of the western local councils is most gratifying. At the meetings in Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria and Vancouver a hearty support of the Foundation Fund was pledged and representatives who attended the meetings from other towns and cities stated that their local councils also intended to give full support.

"It is particularly fitting that the city of Vancouver should be the first to conduct an appeal in this nationwide effort." Mrs. Etherington continued, "since the Foundation Fund Committee was originated at the annual convention of the National Council which was held there two years ago. Mrs. G. O. Fallis, president of the Vancouver Council, is confident her organization will have no difficulty in raising its portion of the fund."

President of the Foundation Fund effort Mrs. Fallis has requested the president of each of the separate women's organizations that compose the local council to secure one life membership.

Mrs. Etherington is starting a tour of the eastern provinces, accompanied with Capt. H. H. Bradford, director of the project. Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, Halifax and St. John will be visited and a number of other local councils will be represented at the meetings in these cities.

HOW DO YOU JUDGE THE VALUE OF SOAP?

You can't tell by looks, nor by size or price! How, then, can you tell?

The surest, safest way to judge good value in soap is by the $5,000 Sunlight Guarantee of Purity.

To women who know what harsh, impure soaps do to hands and fabrics . . . soap purity such as you find in Sunlight, is a boon.

This absolute purity of Sunlight Soap means so much. Sunlight Soap is purposely made to dissolve freely. The pure soapy suds cleanse quickly and thoroughly. Clothes are made snowy. Hands are not roughened or coarsened . . . fabrics are not damaged with injurious chemicals.

Sunlight's Purity is the standard by which millions of women judge soap.

And the number of women who prefer Sunlight is steadily growing.

Nancy peeled the watermelon rind and cut off all traces of red, fruity pulp. She then cut the rind into pieces of serving size and soaked them overnight in salt water. For two pounds of rinds she used a brine made of three tablespoons salt to one quart cold water. In the morning she rinsed the rind and put it to cool in clear water until it was tender.

For pickling syrup she used four cups sugar, one cup water, two cups vinegar, one teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon allspice and one tablespoon cinnamon. She boiled these ingredients for ten minutes. Then she put the tender rind into this pickling vinegar and boiled rapidly until rind was clear. She might have used two tablespoons mixed pickle juice and died it in a bag, then it with vinegar, sugar and water and later taken out bag.

Beaver Tail Bannock

The Bread of the Cree Indians and Hudson's Bay Co. Traders

This type of Bread has been made by the Cree Indians for a number of years. The flour is mixed with water and kneaded into a stiff dough which is then moulded onto a stick and flattened out as shown in the illustration, resembling a Beaver Tail, from which it derives its name. Cross pieces are inserted to keep the dough from sagging, and the end of the stick thrust into the ground over an open fire, where it is left until baked. Beaver Tail Bannock is usually baked fresh every meal and eaten hot. This method of Bread Making was adopted by the Hudson's Bay Co. Freighters.

Canadian women have advanced from old-fashioned methods of home baking, and today enjoy the services of professional Bakers for all their baking needs.

FROST HITS COMOX CROP

But Reports Generally Throughout B.C. Are Encouraging

Frost which has been reported in the Comox district has cut down the potato crop on many farms and, as a result, tubers will probably be below average. According to a report on field crop conditions issued by the B.C. Department of Agriculture.

The acreage sown to Fall wheat will probably be normal. Winter oats are being sown by several farmers this year due to the fact that tests conducted by the Sir Alexander Farm have been very successful where suitable varieties are used.

Speaking of other parts of the Province, the report says harvesting weather in the Pitt Meadows section on the Lower Mainland has been good and threshing of grain is well advanced. The district should have considerable surplus of feed oats for sale. Second and third crops of alfalfa have been stacked in good shape and binding and threshing are general in North and South Thompson Valleys.

Wheat harvesting in the Armstrong district has been accomplished without trouble or delay. The wheat was of a higher grade than usual.

The potato crop of Gran Forks district will probably be less than that of last season when the average tonnage was unusually high. Generally throughout British Columbia good reports are received with crops, although not of bumper proportions, well up to, and in many cases above average.

SOUTH RHODESIA HAS AN ELECTION

Rhodesian Party Given Second Term of Office By Citizens

Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters).—The Southern Rhodesian Government, headed by Premier H. W. Moffat and composed of members of the Rhodesian Party, was returned to power in the general election, held Tuesday, latest returns assuring the Government party of at least sixteen of the thirteen parliamentary seats.

The Progressive party, which came into existence last year as the result of a fusion of independent members and Government supporters who crossed the floor of the House, was practically eliminated. The Progressives' failure to elect more than four members was the surprising feature of the election.

The Labor Party elected members of the House for the first time, three candidates being successful on the basis of available returns.

Seven constituencies have yet to be heard from, and it is considered virtually certain that these will return Government candidates.

The election was the second held since October, 1923, when Southern Rhodesia was formally annexed by the Union of South Africa after being under administration of the British South Africa Company. The change to constitutional government followed a popular referendum.

TAKE VOTE ON DEATH PENALTY

Leaders of Anti-capital Punishment Move in Great Britain Launch Petition

London, Sept. 21 (Canadian Press Cable)—The petition being launched by the National Council for Abolition of the Death Penalty soon will be signed, the forms on which it is hoped to obtain an unchallenged index of public opinion on the matter of capital punishment already being available. Since the state was unlikely to sanction the considerable expense of maintaining a prison, the organization pledged to work for abolition of the death penalty in Great Britain decided to start a petition, which will be presented to Parliament.

Sir Herbert Samuel, former Home Secretary, in an article in The London Evening Standard, said the House of Commons might pass a resolution directing the Home Secretary to reprieve all under death sentences (about one-half already are reprieved). It could then be seen over a period of years whether unsatisfactory results followed. If measures indicated the death penalty could be restored, if they decreased, he said, then the penalty ought to be legally abolished.

On the suggestion of Alfred Carmichael at the regular luncheon meeting of the board at noon to-day, the Real Estate Board of Victoria will appoint a committee to look into conditions of roadways leading over Mount Tolmie.

Mr. Carmichael described the view from the summit of the mountain as one of the finest sunrises on the North American continent.

He said that last Monday he took members of the Ticket Association of America for a drive to the summit and they declared that in the whole of their journey from Pennsylvania they had not seen a view to compare with it.

It was decided that the touring motorists could visit the top on good firm roads should be the business of the board. Mr. Carmichael said.

the prestige of the whites. But that's the story as it stands. Have you any suggestions to make?"

"I'd like to get in touch with the Epoch," said Glyde. "They are in a position to do not expect any one of them, all be ready to commit himself to a statement about their next step. But as a matter of courtesy, it would be well not to spring this yarn as a surprise upon them."

"That's a very good idea," approved the chief. "Anything else?"

"No, thank the Lord it's Sunday, and betting is a dead letter. Nobody is likely to get an unfair start with this piece of news. It could hardly have happened better, since it had to happen."

"Very good. There's no need to press for any official opinion. Give them time to digest the news; and make a point of their being informed before publication takes place."

"You can rely upon me," Glyde promised. "By Jove when this thing gets about, to-morrow, hell will begin to pop."

John Blake saw that something had happened, as soon as he met Gordon at the Club. "It's a real day," Blake said. "I didn't buy the right paper to pass the tedium of his journey from Grappling; and even if he had, it is doubtful whether he would have opened and read it. Far more pleasure and stimulation will be gained by gazing dreamily out of the carriage window and arriving at the wonder and the unexpectedness of Joan."

But he saw that Angus Gordon was distraught; the man even failed to produce his well-known smile as he shook hands.

"Blake," he said shortly. "If you think I made any offer to Miss Kennett, consider it withdrawn."

"You only spoke of making an offer," John replied. "But when you do come forward with a solid proposition, I'll see to it that it's a better offer than that to which I am bound. Did you bring those papers?"

"Yes," said Gordon shortly. "Waring was anxious to get rid of them as you could possibly be to have them. And let me tell you, Blake, that's nothing to be gained by pretending that you don't know what has happened."

"Was I pretending?" John asked. "As it happens, I do not know a single thing. I've just arrived from Grappling, and I haven't seen the papers. The morning had called. Alien Franklin, and it seems to you that he is conclusively dead."

"You mean to say you haven't seen the paper?" Gordon asked. "No, don't answer me. I can see you haven't. Come along; we are almost forgetting the British's seat of duty of hospitality."

The exchange brought a renewed politeness of Gordon's manner. Joan had been right, when she had said that his perception was astonishingly keen.

"Probably you are right," he agreed. "If Franklin has the sense to stay where he is, I think he is pretty safe now. I shouldn't advise him to show himself in the country, though."

Gordon took the ash from his cigar and met John's inquiring look with a pleasant smile.

"Probably you are right," he agreed. "If Franklin has the sense to stay where he is, I think he is pretty safe now. I shouldn't advise him to show himself in the country, though."

"Well, it is his pigeon," John said. "He can suit himself."

"Yes," Gordon agreed. "It is Franklin's pigeon, as you say. I'm glad to have this talk with you, Mr. Blake. We must take the Club at 1 o'clock tomorrow."

"In that case," Gordon said, "I shall be able to offer Miss Kennett £20,000 in cash for half a share of her chance in the Calcutta sweep. In return for obtaining those papers from Waring for you, I want your support in bringing off the deal."

"I'll do it," John meditated. "£20,000, eh? Are you so confident of winning the Derby as all that, Mr. Gordon?"

"I am able to offer that sum," Gordon answered. "I consider it an advantageous offer; both from my own point of view and that of Miss Kennett. Judging by the terms of the bet, it represents a very advantageous bet for me. But Miss Kennett would not get better terms elsewhere. I can show you the record of past transactions of the same kind, to prove that."

"I think Miss Kennett would be wise to do it," John decided. "I'll advise her to do so, if she will listen to my advice. And Waring must hand over those papers, whether she accepts or not. The two questions are separate ones. Mr. Gordon, I decline to recognize any connection between them."

"You shall have the papers," Gordon promised. "Lunch with us at the Cafe Royal to-morrow, and I'll hand them over. And I rely on your doing what you can with Miss Kennett, for her own good."

"That's the way to put it," John agreed.

"Then that's all settled. Now, what is your programme exactly?"

"For the moment," John explained. "No definite statement of Franklin's death has been made; there is nothing but a rumor, for which nobody is responsible. No assertion to meet you see. But I expect to encounter a definite statement of Franklin's death before Derby day."

"Either that," Gordon amended, "or an objection to the colt, if he runs and wins; or is even placed. I regard that as the most likely possibility."

"Then I come forward," John said. "My story is a very simple one. He went on safari for me, and the men came back without him; telling a story which pointed to his death. Later, I agreed."

"Then that's all settled. Now, what is your programme exactly?"

Book of Knowledge

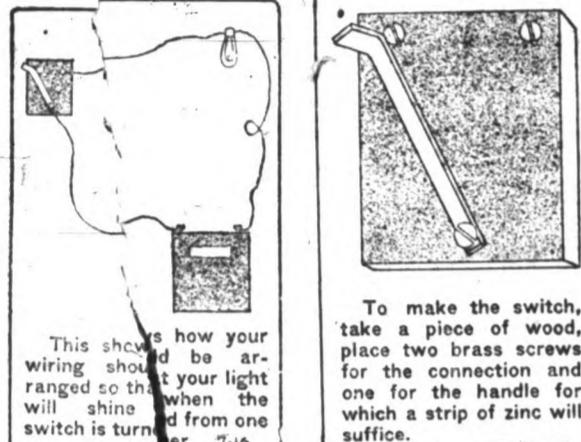

Sketches by Bessie, Synopsis by Bruce.

AN ELECTRIC LIGHT

Perhaps you have built the summer house suggested before in this series, or you may have an outdoor shack you would like to illuminate with an electric light. An accumulator or storage battery is more powerful than a dry battery for this purpose and can be recharged. You need some wire, a small bulb, a socket and reflector. Flex wire is best to use. 7-16

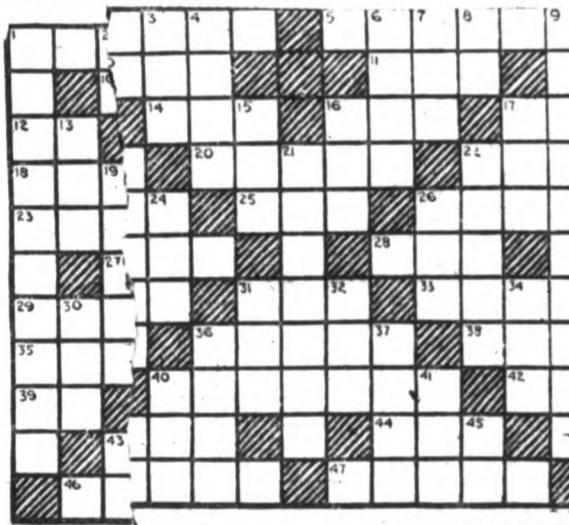

By NEA. Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge. Copyright, 1923-26.

This shows how your wiring should be arranged so that your light will shine when the switch is turned from one screw to another. 7-16

Plan your wiring so that it will be most convenient, with the switch near the door by which you enter or leave. This shows how comfortable a light can make your summer house. If you use a dry battery it will not support a very powerful lamp. Storage batteries can be recharged for a small cost and give more power. (Next: A Coal Box) 7-16

COLUMBIA PICTURE SHOWS HOOT GIBSON IN THRILLING FILM

Hoot Gibson recently paid the property department at Universal City $25 for a 1918 model "Flivver," with which he plans to embellish his collection of expensive cars. The old "buggy" was used in Gibson's latest picture, "Riding for Fame," which is now playing to enthusiastic audiences at the Columbia Theatre. The actor became so fond of the car that he decided to buy it. Heading the supporting cast of this thrilling Western production is beautiful Ethlyn Chaff. Others in the company are Charles K. French, George Sturzerville, Allan Forrest and Ruth Cherrington. Reaves Eason directed.

HIGH-PRICED JURY COMPOSED OF STARS IN VARIETY STORY

The highest priced jury in all history is the one which serves in First National's production of the new star-studded comedy, "The Woman on the Jury," now playing at the Variety Theatre, and which was directed by Harry O. Hoyt. Just try to compute the daily "fees" of a jury that is composed of Sylvia Breamer, Frank Mayo, Ray Stewart, Ford Sterling, Jean Hersholt, Arthur Lubin, Stanion Heck, Fred Warren, Arthur S. Hull, Kewpie King, Leo White and J. Edward Davis. And real jurors get $8 per day.

D'OYLY CARTE OPERA STANDARD RESULT OF LONG YEAR OF WORK

The average lover of comic opera, attending the D'Oyly Carte Company any time during their forthcoming tour of Canada, perhaps hardly realizes the fact that the standard of perfection attained by this organization is the result of long years of the most exacting and strenuous training, combined with a constant attention to detail and to individual talent and its development.

The D'Oyly Carte Company is unique. It is a national institution in the Old Country, and the organization has striven to uphold and standards to maintain. This can only be accomplished by dint of the most searching and constant training and examination of those whose talents give promise of practical exploitation.

Gilbert and Sullivan interpreters are not made in a week or a month. The casual presentation of a Gilbert and Sullivan opera is a thing the D'Oyly Carte regime abhors. Everything must be precisely as the authors originally wrote it, and the right to the structure and action of the comedian. Moreover, movement must be synchronized accurately with the music, and this can only be achieved when the production is made under the supervision of those who are versed at first hand with such intentions and designs as Gilbert and Sullivan made manifest.

Aspirants for entrance into the company must undergo a very severe test. To qualify for personality, all three are of the utmost importance. The spoken line in these operas is as significant as those that are sung. Only the beginners who meet all three tests satisfactorily can hope to secure a place with the organization. Then, for years, and as promoted, first to minor, and later to major roles, as their ability and development, and vacancies occurring, may warrant.

Evidence of this is to be noted in the company that has come to tour Canada for a second time. Some of this year's principals have been promoted from minor roles and from the chorus, having proved their worthiness by their achievement during the probationary period of work they have done. Thus the company is always retained as a nucleus of principals with artists who have grown up together, who have learned the knack of coordinated effort and action, and who are able to co-operate to the best possible advantage at all times.

Buster Keaton as "STEAMBOAT BILL JR." IN DOMINION FILM

To the accompaniment of river shipping wars, tornadoes and love affairs, Buster Keaton is leading a laugh carnival that is well on the way to the Dominion Theatre, where the fresh-faced star's new United Artists comedy, "Steamboat Bill Jr.," is showing in this territory.

Keaton has made several highly successful feature comedies during his stint as a dancer in "Lady Be Good," the First National picture now showing here at the Playhouse Theatre. Miss Mackaill was in the "Follies" for two seasons before launching her film career.

PARISIENNE STORY
ON CAPITOL SCREEN
FOR REST OF WEEK

Opening yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, the much-heralded comedy "The Magnificent Flirt," starring the fashionable and fascinating Florence Vidor, creates quite a favorable comment from the audiences.

"The Magnificent Flirt" is the story of a Parisienne who has, during many years, accumulated a horde of male admirers. Finally she succumbs to the attractions of one of a certain Count D'Ernest, whose nephew is in love with her daughter.

The stage specialties for to-day and tomorrow at the Capitol offer the Staunton Sisters, champion hard shoe dancers of America; Gonella and Wilson, Italian singers and musicians, and Rastus Buckner, the well-known comedian of the Capitol Concert Orchestra and Harold Bechtel, the singing master of ceremonies.
